MEMO to Faculty/Staff
From: Ms. Marian D. Whitney, Human Protection Administrator, and Dr. Shirley A. Crawford, Chairperson, Institutional Review Board (IRB)
RE: Data Collection for Middle States Accreditation or Program Reviews
November 12, 2009

Many of us will be involved in gathering data from various constituents for assessment purposes such as those associated with Middle States Accreditation and Program Reviews. In order to meet the criteria for exempt status from the IRB, all respondents must be assured that their participation is voluntary and their input will be anonymous. To that end, data collection should be done as follows:

1. If a written response is being sought, respondents will be informed that they must be at least 18 years of age to participate without written parental/guardian consent and that their comments are being submitted voluntarily. Comments will not be associated with individual respondents and anonymity is assured by using codes instead of names on the returns and by secure collating of comments as they come in. Rigorous security of the codes associated with the names and addresses maintained for the written submissions must be established.

2. Data collected electronically must adhere to the same assurances as the written response outlined above. To insure that IP addresses are not collected, please see the attached document that shows what needs to be done in surveymonkey. If you have any questions about surveymonkey contact the ICS Web Team.

Adherence to the above collection methods will promote more comprehensive comments, while protecting the respondents as well as those charged with gathering assessment data. It will not be necessary to involve the IRB as long as data collection occurs as delineated in 1 and 2 above.

Amy Roberts, director of public relations, holds up the hoodies awarded to the winning team.

Laurie Trotta, assistant professor of aquaculture and renewable resources, participates as a member of the "Outdoor Recreation Clubs" team.
