Have a Good Mental Health Day at Work

If you suffer from depression and/ or anxiety, you know that their symptoms don't park themselves at the front door when you arrive at work. They might affect your mood and productivity, with some days being worse than others. Be sure to develop a strategy for yourself so you can manage the symptoms that are making your day a struggle. Reach out to an employee assistance program. Contact a "health buddy" (someone with whom you can share or can create a scenario of mutual support), take rejuvenating short breaks away from the work site, or work with your medical provider to explore reasonable accommodations. Both you and your employer want the same thing: You feeling your best and benefiting from your skills and abilities.

Gratitude's GotScience Behind It

The benefits of practicing gratitude have real science behind them. This principle recognizes that how we think and condition ourselves to think produces expectations and plays a significant role in our self-esteem, perception, decisions, and ability to manage stress. Research supports the benefits of practicing gratitude.

In one study, those who wrote about gratitude ten minutes a day were more optimistic and felt better about their lives, exercised more, and had fewer visits to physicians than those who did not. Practicing gratitude is a simple process: You simply reflect regularly on the people and things you are grateful for.

Giving Feedback that Sticks

Advice about giving feedback often centers on reducing the recipient's defensiveness, not whether the feedback will create change.

However, there is a science-based approach for the latter. It's called "Situation – Behavior – Impact (SBI.)" SBI consists of three essential elements: Identifying the situation needing feedback, describing the behavior needing change, and explaining the impact of the behavior in a way that motivates the recipient to make changes in the future. Giving feed-back isn't always easy, but an internet search of the SBI Model can show you how to deliver more effective feedback.

Feeling Great, But Do You have Prediabetes?

You can feel like a million bucks and still have a serious health condition called prediabetes. According to the Centers for Disease Control, one out of three adults in the United States has prediabetes. That's 83 million people.

Soft Skills . . . Maintain a Positive Attitude

Having a positive attitude does not mean you are dismissive of problems and concerns, while others who are pessimistic or downbeat are more mature and realistic in the face of undesirable circumstances. A positive attitude is driven by a belief that successful outcomes and solutions to problems are often influenced by optimism. A person with a positive attitude can still feel the tug to be negative; however, he or she succumbs to it less often. Maintaining a positive attitude is a learned skill, valued by employers, and often mentioned in performance reviews. If your attitude is easily affected by circumstances, try practicing "conscious positivity." When you don't guite feel like being positive, be excited for others' achievements. Have fun playing cards when you are losing. Be friendly to others you don't know. Motivate others by saying something positive. Avoid letting others' negativity bring you down. And, ditch the "yeah, but..." With practice, you'll get the hang of it.

Find Moments for Movement to Stay Fit

Research has shown that sitting at a desk most of the day can take a toll on your health. For this reason, some health experts call long-term sitting "the new smoking." Stand-up desks and even expensive treadmill-desks have been introduced to mitigate this health crisis. There may be an easier way to mitigate all the risk: Move when you get the chance. Walk in the morning, walk at lunch, pace while on the phone, do some stretches every 30 minutes, try a few sit-ups, do some lunges, and/or try "burpees." Put a reminder sticker near your desk that says "Move!" and fight the impact of sedentary work. See "lunges" and "burpees" on YouTube. (Get your doctor's approval for an exercise program, if needed.)
